Communication is key to any relationship. What are the mechanisms, formal and informal, that encourage good communication between a trial court administrator and the state court administrator and the state administrative office?
Ideally, what is the relationship between a trial court administrator and the state court administrator and the state court administrative office?
How can a state court administrator assure Equity in decision making and if there is a “dispute” among a trial court administrator and the state court office, what are some effective ways to resolve differences yet still assure equity?
As the State Court Administrator, how do you include trial judges, trial court administrators and other court managers in decision making and in the development of state court programs and services?
What can we, as State Court Administrators, take back to our colleagues, and particularly to our many new members, to improve communication and better support the needs of trial court judges and managers?
